Under the European Union's Lisbon Treaty, the creation of a European External Action Service under an EU High Representative was intended to give the EU greater weight and coherence in pursuing a European Foreign Policy. With the Lisbon Treaty in force for over a year, observers are now looking for results: What has changed with the creation of the Action Service? What has been accomplished? Where does it go from here? Christian Leffler, the European External Action Service's Managing Director for the Americas, will address these and other questions in a roundtable discussion.
