

About the Authors

Kevsler Hülya Akdemir graduated from Istanbul Şehir University, Department of Political Science and International Relations in 2015. In 2016 she completed the Double Major Program at Sociology Department of the same university. Akdemir continues her graduate studies in Political Science and International Relations program of İstanbul Şehir University. Started to working at SETA Foundation's Society and Culture Directorate as a Research Assistant in January 2017, Ms. Akdemir's area of academic interests are religion-politics and media-politics relations and Islamic movements in Turkey.

Serdar Altay is the Coordinator for Strategic Planning, and Research and Development at the Investment Support and Promotion Agency of Turkey (ISPAT). Operating under the Office of the Turkish Prime Minister, ISPAT provides professional advice and assistance to foreign investors before, during, and after their business operations in Turkey. Altay leads a team that carries out regular analysis of investment trends and policies and advises the ISPAT management on the development of national investment attraction strategies. He also advises the OECD and Central Asian Countries on investment promotion strategies, and teaches macroeconomics and a course on EU economics and institutions as an adjunct professor at the Istanbul Technical University. Altay started his professional career as a civil servant at the Turkish Ministry of Economy in Ankara where he served as a Trade Specialist and negotiator between 2000 and 2004. He spent three years researching GATT/WTO negotiations on services trade and investment at the University of Trento (Italy), University of Kassel (Germany), and University of Lausanne (Switzerland). Between 2008-2011 he managed the trade programming of the German Marshall Fund of the United States at its headquarters in Washington, D.C. Altay is a graduate of the Middle East Technical University (Turkey) with a B.Sc. degree in International Relations and holds an M.A. degree in International Political Economy from Warwick University (UK). He also holds Ph.D. degrees in International Studies (Trento University) and in Economics and Social Sciences (Kassel University). Altay has expertise in international trade, foreign direct investment and development issues, as well as in transatlantic economic relations and the political economy of Turkey.

Altay Atlı is a Research Associate at Sabancı University's Istanbul Policy Center, and an adjunct lecturer on international political economy, Asian economies, and international relations in the Asia Pacific at various universities in Istanbul. Atlı obtained his Ph.D. at the Department of Political Science and International Relations of Boğaziçi University. He has worked as a research coordinator at Turkey's Foreign Economic Relations Board (DEİK). In addition to his academic work, he continues to provide training and consulting services for the business sector. Atlı is a columnist at the Hong Kong-based international news and opinion portal Asia Times and more details on his work can be found in his personal web site www.altay-atli.com.

Enes Bayraklı is a faculty member at the Department of Political Science and International Relations, and Head of the European and International Affairs M.A. Program at the Turkish-German University since 2013. Currently, he is also the Director of European Studies at the SETA foundation. He took office as a Deputy Director at the Yunus Emre Turkish Cultural Center in London between 2011-2013. Bayraklı also served as the founding director of Yunus Emre Turkish Cultural Centers in Constanta and Bucharest during the period of August-December 2012. His areas of research include Islamophobia in Europe, Transformation of Turkish Foreign Policy, Foreign Policy Analysis, and German Politics and Foreign Policy. Bayraklı earned his B.A., M.A. and Ph.D. from the Department of Political Science at the University of Vienna, and conducted research for his Ph.D. thesis at the University of Nottingham in Great Britain between 2009 and 2010.

Münevver Cebeci is an Associate Professor at the European Union Institute (Jean Monnet Center of Excellence) at Marmara University in Istanbul, and is a Visiting Professor at the College of Europe-Natolin in Warsaw. She has taught several courses, including "European Foreign Policy," "Security Studies," and "International Relations Theories" since 2001. Her course "International Politics of the EU" was awarded as a "Jean Monnet Permanent Course" by the European Commission in 2002-2007. She has given lectures at various universities, including: Bilgi University-Istanbul, Bilkent University-Ankara, Université libre de Bruxelles, and Canterbury Christ Church University. She is a former Visiting Fellow at WEU (now, the EU) Institute for Security Studies (April-June 1998) and a former Senior Researcher of the College of Europe-Natolin (April 2016-April 2017). She holds a Ph.D. in EU Politics and International Relations from the European Union Institute, Marmara University, an M.S.c. in International Relations from the London School of Economics (as a Jean Monnet scholar) and a M.A. in International Relations from the Social Sciences Institute at Marmara University. Her research interests include European Foreign Policy (especially the Euro-Mediterranean Partnership and European Neighborhood Policy) and Security Studies. She has published two books and numerous scholarly articles in journals and edited books. Her latest book, Issues in EU and U.S. Foreign Policy (an edited volume) was published by Lexington Books in 2011. Her next book, De-Constructing Ideal Power Europe: The EU and the Arab Change will be published by Lexington Books in 2017.

Filiz Cicioğlu is an assistant professor of International Relations at Sakarya University and teaches on the politics of the European Union and on International Organizations. Her main research areas are the European Union, Turkey-EU relations, and civil society in Turkey and Europe. Her recent works have been published in academic journals and edited book volumes. Cicioğlu holds a B.A. in International Relations from Sakarya University, and a Ph.D. with a dissertation titled “The Approach of NGOs Towards Turkey’s European Union Policy within the Framework of Civil Society-Foreign Policy Relations” from Sakarya University.

Şükrü Cicioğlu is an assistant professor in the department of Economics at Sakarya University, and teaches monetary policy and financial economics. His main research areas include financial economics and the Turkish economy. His recent works have been published in academic journals and edited book volumes. Cicioğlu holds a B.A. in Economics from Sakarya University and a Ph.D. with a dissertation titled “Financial Deepening and Repression Analysis in Financial Liberalization Process at Turkish Economy” from Marmara University.

İsmail Çağlar graduated from Middle East Technical University Department of Sociology, İsmail Çağlar holds his master’s degree and doctorate at Leiden University in the Netherlands. Mr. Çağlar, lecturer at İstanbul Medeniyet University, Department of Political Science and Public Administration, is also the director of Society and Culture Directorate of SETA Foundation. Among his many research papers and books, some of his publications are From Symbolic Exile to Physical Exile: Turkey’s Imam Hatip Schools (Amsterdam University Press, 2013), the Emergence of a Conservative Counter-Elite, and Its Knowledge Migration to Europe (Amsterdam University Press, 2013) and Press Freedom in Turkey: Myths and Truths (SETA Publications, 2016). Political history, media-politics relations, modernization and religion-state relations are among his area of interests.

Beril Dedeoğlu is a Professor of International Relations at Galatasaray University. After her studies at the International Relations Department of Istanbul University, Dedeoğlu began her academic career as Research Assistant in the same institution. Dedeoğlu is a member of the International Relations Department of Galatasaray University since 1995, she also obtained her professor title in 2005 and assumed the Head of the department position until 2015. She served as the Minister of the European Union in the 63th Turkish government between September–November 2015. Since 2012, she is a member of the Higher Education Council (YÖK), from the presidential contingent. She is also a member of CISs/ISA, IPSA, and UAIK. Dedeoğlu focuses on the EU, international security and strategy, and Turkish foreign policy. She has published several books, including The EU Step by Step (1996), Notes on the Middle East (2002), International Security and Strategy (2003), The EU from Yesterday to Tomorrow (2003), New Balances in a Changing World (2008), EU-Turkey: Analysis of the Privileged Partnership (2010), Regional Integration (2015). She is the co-author of many other books and has published several articles. Moreover, Dedeoğlu is a regular columnist for Turkish newspapers Star and the Daily Sabah. She holds a Ph.D. with a thesis on the monetary union-political union relation in the European communities' integration process.

Mehmet Uğur Ekinçi is an Assistant Professor of International Relations at the Turkish National Police Academy and a foreign policy researcher at the SETA Foundation in Ankara. Among his research interests are contemporary Balkan politics, European politics, domestic-international linkages, Ottoman and Republican foreign policy and political history. He holds a B.A. in International Relations and a M.A. in History from Bilkent University. Having completed doctoral coursework at the Ohio State University and Bilkent University, he obtained a Ph.D. in Politics and International Studies at SOAS, University of London.

Emre Erşen is an Associate Professor at Marmara University's Department of Political Science and International Relations in Istanbul, Turkey. He received his Ph.D. from the same department. He has conducted research at the Higher School of Economics (Russia), the Institute for Human Sciences (Austria), the University of Kent (United Kingdom) and Jagiellonian University (Poland) as a Visiting Fellow. He has written for a number of academic publications, including Geopolitics, Turkish Studies, Insight Turkey, and the Journal of Eurasian Studies. He has contributed many conference papers on Turkish-Russian relations, Eurasianism, and Turkish geopolitics.

Tea Ivanovic is a Fellow at the Center for Transatlantic Relations (CTR) at the Johns Hopkins University Paul H. Nitze School of Advanced International Studies (SAIS). She is the Washington correspondent for Sarajevo-based Oslobodjenje. Previously, Ivanovic was at the financial consultancy Capstone LLC, and at the Institute of International Finance (IIF), in Washington D.C. While completing her M.A., she was a Graduate Research Fellow at the Center for Constitutional Studies and Democratic Development (CCSDD) in Bologna, Italy. At SAIS Europe, she was involved with the organization of the 60th anniversary celebration of the SAIS Europe Center, and was the Vice President and co-founder of the Women in International Affairs (WIA) organization. Ivanovic was at the United Nations University Institute of Comparative Integration Studies (UNU-CRIS) in Bruges, Belgium, where she was the editor for United Nations University publications, and organized a joint UNU-CRIS and International Studies Association (ISA) conference in Bruges. Ivanovic published her undergraduate thesis “External Pressures and Domestic Changes: The European Union, Council of Europe, and the Minorities in Vojvodina” in the academic journal publication Philologia, which she presented at various conferences, including at the International Symposium on Cultural Diplomacy in the EU, in July 2013. She is co-editor of Vision 2020: Bosnia and Herzegovina Towards its European Future (Washington, DC: Center for Transatlantic Relations, 2017) and Iraqi Kurdistan Region: A Path Forward (Washington, DC: Center for Transatlantic Relations, 2017). She wrote for the SAIS Johns Hopkins newspaper, the SAIS Observer, as a graduate student, and has contributed and co-authored articles for the Huffington Post and The Cipher Brief. She holds a M.A. in International Relations and International Economics from The Johns Hopkins Paul H. Nitze School of Advanced International Studies (SAIS), and graduated Summa Cum Laude and Phi Beta Kappa from her B.A. in International Studies from Virginia Tech, where she received a four-year athletic scholarship for the Division 1 varsity tennis team. She speaks English, Dutch, Serbo-Croatian, is conversational in French, and basic Italian and German.

Donald N. Jensen is a Senior Fellow at the Center for Transatlantic Relations, Johns Hopkins School of Advanced International Studies and Adjunct Senior Fellow, Center for European Policy Analysis, where he editor of the CEPA Information Warfare Initiative. A former US diplomat, Jensen provided technical support for the START, INF, and SDI negotiations and was a member of the first ten-man US inspection team to inspect Soviet missiles under the INF Treaty in 1988. From 1996–2008 he was Associate Director of Broadcasting and Head of the Research Division at RFE/RL where he helped lead that organization's expansion into new broadcast regions after the end of the Cold War and adaptation of multimedia technology to deal with the challenges of the 21st Century. Jensen was a foreign policy advisor to the presidential campaign of Governor John Kasich in 2016. Jensen writes extensively on the domestic, foreign and security policies of Russia, Ukraine, and the other post-Soviet states, including for The American Interest, US News, Newsweek, the Voice of America and the Institute of Modern Russia. He is a regular commentator on CNBC, Fox News, RFE/RL and the Voice of America. He has lectured at a variety of universities, including Johns Hopkins, Harvard, Oxford and George Washington University. A noted baseball historian specializing in the Dead Ball Era and the 19th Century game, Jensen is a member of the Society for American Baseball Research and has written or co-authored several books and articles on the sport. He was the 2015 winner of the Chairman's Award of the SABR Nineteenth Century Committee and is a regular lecturer at the Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, NY. Jensen is the incoming editor of Baseball: A Journal of the Early Game. He received his Ph.D. and M.A. from Harvard University and B.A. from Columbia University.

Edward P. Joseph is a foreign policy specialist, writer/lecturer and field practitioner who has served in some of the toughest locations in the world. Edward spent over a dozen years in the Balkans, including the war years in Bosnia, Croatia, Kosovo, and Macedonia, as well as shorter stints in Afghanistan, Pakistan, Iraq, and Haiti. In April 2012, as Deputy Head of the OSCE Mission in Kosovo, he negotiated an eleventh-hour breakthrough on Serbian elections that averted a brewing crisis between Serbia and Kosovo. Secretary of State Hillary Clinton issued written acknowledgement of Edward's standout contribution. During the war in Bosnia-Herzegovina, Edward served in a number of isolated, besieged locations including the Zepa 'safe area' near Srebrenica where, in July 1995, Edward and a UN colleague coordinated the evacuation of thousands of Bosnian Muslim women, children and wounded men. His work required face-to-face dealings with indicted war criminal General Ratko Mladic. Edward has twice testified before The Hague Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia. Edward's reports for the International Crisis Group in Macedonia broke new ground on the link between corruption and conflict, as well as on the name issue with Greece. Edward brought his extensive field experience to Johns Hopkins School of Advanced International Studies in Washington where he teaches conflict management, and writes and speaks extensively on foreign policy issues. He has been published in most major media outlets including The New York Times, Foreign Affairs, and Foreign Policy, as well as in academic journals. Edward appears frequently on television and radio as a commentator on major international events. Edward also served as Director of Communications for the Council on Foreign Relations. In addition to the Balkans, Edward has served in Iraq, Afghanistan, Pakistan and Haiti, where he was Chief Election Observer for the USAID-funded observation mission in 2006. While in Peshawar, Pakistan in 2007, Edward held on 26 December what may have been the final international meeting with Benazir Bhutto. In late 2008-early 2009, Edward was a member of the three-person expert team that evaluated USAID's largest local stability program in Afghanistan, visiting more than a dozen sites "outside the wire", including Kandahar. Relief work, in particular humanitarian emergencies, is another specialty of Edward's. Following the devastating 2010 earthquake in Haiti, Edward led InterAction's effort to coordinate the NGO response. During the NATO air campaign in 1999, Edward co-managed the famed Stenkovec-I refugee camp that housed over 30,000 Kosovar refugees and was the site of high profile visits from President Clinton, Hillary Clinton, Kofi Annan and others. Edward holds a J.D. from the University of Virginia, and a B.A. and M.A. from Johns Hopkins University and the School of Advanced International Studies, respectively. He was a helicopter pilot in the US Army Reserve. He speaks and has worked professionally in Bosnian/Croatian/Serbian and French, Italian and Spanish.

Erdal Tanas Karagöl is a Professor of Economics at Yıldırım Beyazıt University and Director of Energy Research at the SETA Foundation. He worked as a lecturer at Balıkesir University and Ankara Yıldırım Beyazıt University. Previously, Karagöl was Director of the Economic Research Department at the SETA Foundation. His articles on foreign debt, international finance, IMF stand-by, economic growth, energy and defense economics, and social policy and employment have been published in several journals. On a bi-weekly basis, he contributes his economic analysis to the Yeni Şafak newspaper. He holds a B.A. from the Faculty of Economics at Istanbul University, and a M.A. in Economics from the University of Connecticut. He received his Ph.D. from York University.

Christina Lin is a Research Fellow at the Center for Global Peace and Conflict Studies (CGPACS) at the University of California, Irvine, and a Non-Resident Fellow at the Center for Transatlantic Relations (CTR), the Johns Hopkins University, Paul H. Nitze School of Advanced International Studies (SAIS), focusing on China-Mediterranean and OSCE relations. She was a Visiting Academic Fellow at the Berlin-based Mercator Institute for China Studies in the spring of 2016 and a 2013-2014 Transatlantic Academy Fellow at the German Marshall Fund of the United States. Lin has extensive U.S. government experience working on China security issues including policy planning at the US Department of Defense, the National Security Council and the U.S. Department of State.

Jennifer Miel is the Executive Director of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce's U.S.-Turkey Business Council, the home of the bilateral commercial relationship between the United States and Turkey. In this capacity, Jennifer works closely with senior business leaders and has expanded the program from 12 to 60+ of the largest U.S. companies to advance their investments in Turkey. She directs the Council's policy and programmatic agenda, including meetings with senior government officials and the preparation and launch of report, "Upgrading the U.S.-Turkey Commercial Relationship: A Shared Vision toward a U.S.-Turkey Free Trade Agreement," in Ankara in September 2015. Jennifer also serves as the U.S.-Bahrain Business Council Executive Director and the U.S. Chamber of Commerce's Turkey and Senior Director for Middle East Affairs supporting programming and policy formulation across Egypt and the Gulf Cooperation Council countries. In 2014, she led the U.S. Chamber of Commerce to open its Regional Office in Istanbul which she now directs from Washington. This new office has established a permanent advocacy presence in the region for U.S. companies to grow and create enhanced economic opportunities for countries in Turkey and the Middle East. Before joining the U.S. Chamber, Jennifer worked as a financial analyst at Jones Lang LaSalle for nearly three years. There, she advised the U.S. Army on a $12.7 billion portfolio of real estate assets. Jennifer earned a B.S. in urban and regional planning and a B.A. in Spanish literature from Cornell University. She completed her graduate studies in public policy at Georgetown University. In 2017, Jennifer was named one of the top 40 young professionals in foreign policy under 40 by the Huffington Post. Additionally, she is active in the Association for Women in International Trade and is a mentor to Washington, D.C. high school students.

Nona Mikhelidze is Head of the Eastern Europe and Eurasia Program at the Istituto Affari Internazionali (IAI) in Rome. Her research interests include the ENP and conflict resolution in the South Caucasus, the wider Black Sea and regional cooperation, Turkey and Caspian Region, and Russian foreign policy in the ex-Soviet space. Mikhelidze holds a Ph.D. in Political Science from Scuola Normale Superiore (Pisa), and a M.A. in “Regionalism: Central Asia and Caucasian Studies” from the Humboldt University in Berlin (HU), where she was awarded with the Volkswagen Foundation Scholarship as a Research Fellow. She also holds B.A. and M.A. degrees in International Relations from Tbilisi State University.

Çiğdem Nas is an associate professor at the Political Science and International Relations Department of the Yıldız Technical University in Istanbul, Turkey. Her areas of expertise cover EU political system, Turkey and EU relations, identity and minority issues in international politics. She is the Secretary-General of a non-governmental research organization specialized on the EU, the Economic Development Foundation. She completed her BA at the Bosphorous University, her Msc at the London School of Economics and Political Science, and her PhD at the Marmara University European Union Institute. She later worked as a research assistant and lecturer at the same Institute between 1994 and 2007. She participated in several EU projects, conducted Jean Monnet courses on European integration, and acted as coordinator at the Turkish Universities EU Association (TUNAECS). She co-edited Turkey and the EU: Processes of Europeanization published by Ashgate and co-authored Turkey and EU Integration: Achievements and Obstacles published by Routledge.

Aslı Şirin Öner is at the Department of Sociology (2008-2012) and the European Union Institute at Marmara University (2012-present). Her research concentrates on migration studies including Turkish migration policy and EU-Turkey relations in the field of migration and asylum, Balkan politics, and EU relations with the Western Balkans as her main research topics on which she has authored articles and edited books. Her latest book is about the reality of return in post-war Bosnia from the Bosnians’ perspective (in Turkish). Her recent research was about the migration and integration of Turks of Bulgaria (1989 émigrés) and Ahıska Turks in Turkey (carried out in the 2010-2014 period). She studied Political Science and International Relations at Marmara University. She received her Ph.D. at the European Union Institute of Marmara University, with a dissertation about refugee return to Bosnia after the war.

Yonca Özer is an associate professor in European Studies and lecturer at the European Union Institute of the Marmara University in Istanbul. She received her BA in political science and international relations at the Marmara University, her Master's degrees at the European Union Institute of the Marmara University and at the London School of Economics, and her PhD degree at the European Union Institute of the Marmara University. Her main research interests are EU-Turkey relations, democratisation, international political economy and external relations of the EU. She wrote various articles and participated in many international conferences on these subjects. She also supervised MA and PhD theses on European studies and teaches courses on EU-Turkey Relations, EU Politics and International Political Economy. She edited a book titled Living in a Unipolar World: Facts, Misconceptions and Expectations for the Social Democracy Foundation (SODEV) in Turkey. She is one of the editors of the book titled Turkey and the EU: Processes of Europeanization which was published by Ashgate in 2012. She is also one of the authors of the book titled Turkey and EU Integration: Achievements and Obstacles, which was published by Routledge in 2017.

Nicolò Sartori is a Senior Fellow and Head of the Energy, Climate and Resources Program at the Istituto Affari Internazionali (IAI). His research focuses on the external dimension of EU energy policy, as well as on the process of European integration in the energy and climate domain. He is a Professional Fellow at the World Energy Council (WEC) in Italy, and editor of the column "Centers of Gravity" in the international review of Oil Magazine. He served as faculty advisor at the NATO Defense College in Rome, where he also conducted research on NATO's role as energy security provider in the Caspian region. He holds a B.A. in International and Diplomatic Studies from the School Roberto Ruffilli in Forlì and an M.A. in International Relations from the University of Bologna.

Eduard Soler i Lecha is a senior research fellow at the Barcelona Centre for International Affairs (CIDOB) and lecturer on international relations at Ramon Llull-Blanquerna University and the Institut Barcelona d'Estudis Internacionals (IBEI). He is the scientific coordinator of MENARA (www.menarproject.eu), a H2020 research project on the emerging regional order in the Middle East and North Africa and the Team Leader of El-Hiwar, a training project implemented by the College of Europe on Euro-Arab diplomacy. His main areas of expertise are geopolitics in the MENA region, Turkey and European policies towards the Southern neighbourhood. He has extensively published in academic journals such as Mediterranean Politics and the International Spectator as well as in policy-oriented ones such as Política Exterior or Insight Turkey.

Merve Seren is a researcher in Security Studies Department at the SETA Foundation since 2015. She is responsible for conducting research on issues related to security, defense and intelligence such as air and missile defense systems, UAV technology, cyber security and military expenditure. Seren has worked in the Grand National Assembly of Turkey as a Parliamentary Advisor between 2005-2015. She holds a B.A. in Political Science and Public Administration from Bilkent University and an M.A. in European Union studies from Başkent University while pursuing her Erasmus Scholarship at Rheinische Friedrich Wilhelms Universität Bonn, in Germany. She entered International Security and Terrorism Department's Ph.D. program in Turkish Military Academy and then attended the Turkish Police Academy as a Ph.D. candidate where she defended her doctoral dissertation on strategic intelligence and national security. Seren was accepted to the U.S. Legislative Fellow Program, co-sponsored by the Freedom House and the National Democratic Institute, funded by the U.S. Department of State. In addition, she was selected as a member of the Atlantic Council's Young Atlanticist NATO Working Group and attended to the GLOBSEC Bratislava as well as the NATO Young Atlanticist Summit held on the outskirts of the NATO Summit in Chicago. Seren was chosen to the First Middle-East Generational Ambassadors Summit hosted by the Richardson Center, co-sponsored by the Aspen Institute, also to the Youth Ministerial Meeting, organized by Atlantic Treaty Association in collaboration with NATO Public Diplomacy Division. Furthermore, she was chosen to the Munich Young Leaders, a joint initiative of Körber Foundation and Munich Security Conference. Her most recent book is Strategic Intelligence and National Security published by ORION in 2016.

Melike Janine Sökmen is researcher at Barcelona Center for International Affairs (CIDOB). She is involved in FEUTURE, a Horizon 2020 project on the future of EU-Turkey relations. Her research interests include Turkish foreign policy in Europe and the Middle East, diaspora politics and transnational activism - particularly the cases of the Turkish and Kurdish diaspora.

Sasha Toperich is a Senior Fellow and Mediterranean Basin Initiative Director at the Center for Transatlantic Relations (CTR), at the Paul H. Nitze School of Advanced International Studies (SAIS) of the Johns Hopkins University in Washington D.C. He is also the President of the America-Bosnia Foundation (ABF), President of the World Youth Leadership Network (WYLN), a business consultant to a number of companies worldwide, and a world-renowned pianist. Toperich is the co-chairman of the Mediterranean Women in Leadership and Civil Society Conference, and the chairman of the Supervisory Board at the Mediterranean Development Initiative in Tunisia, established as part of the Initiative. He is co-editor of the book A New Paradigm: Perspectives on the Changing Mediterranean (Washington, DC: Center for Transatlantic Relations, 2014) with Andrew Mullins, and Challenges of Democracy in the European Union and Its Neighbors (Washington, DC: Center for Transatlantic Relations, 2016) with Aylin Ünver Noi. He is the co-author of two papers in the book Unfinished Business: Western Balkans and the International Community (Washington, DC: Center for Transatlantic Relations, 2012), titled “The Regulatory Environment in the Financial System in Bosnia and Herzegovina and How to Improve It” and “A New Paradigm for the Mediterranean: US – North Africa- Southeast Europe.” He also co-authored the article “Challenges of Democracy in Bosnia - Herzegovina” in the book Challenges of Democracy in the European Union and Its Neighbors (Washington, DC: Center for Transatlantic Relations, 2016). In 2011, Toperich co-chaired a major international conference in Sarajevo titled “The Western Balkans: Progress, Stagnation, or Regression,” organized by the America-Bosnia Foundation and the Center for Transatlantic Relations SAIS. He was also the coordinator of the “SAIS Southeast Europe Economic Forum” held in March 2012 at the Johns Hopkins University in Washington DC. Toperich also held several diplomatic positions for Bosnia and Herzegovina. In 2002 – 2003, he was an advisor to the Ambassador of Bosnia and Herzegovina to the United Nations, from 2003- 2007, he was a Special Envoy of the Presidency of Bosnia and Herzegovina to the United States; and in 2009 and 2010, he served as a Counselor at the Permanent Mission of Bosnia and Herzegovina to the United Nations. He is a featured columnist at U.S.Military.com and holds a blog at the Huffington Post. A native of Sarajevo, he earned his B.A. and M.A. degrees in piano from the Rubin Academy of Music in Jerusalem and his Ph.D. in music from the Academy in Lovran, Croatia. At the age of sixteen, Toperich won the first place in the national piano competition in the former Yugoslavia. Toperich performed concerts in Austria, Germany, France, The Netherlands, Belgium, Italy, Russia, Croatia, Serbia, Switzerland, China, South Korea, Japan, Brazil, Egypt, Israel, Liberia and the United States, in legendary halls including the Concertgebouw in Amsterdam, Vatroslav Lisinski in Zagreb, Carnegie Hall, and ORT Hall, with conductors such as Zubin Mehta and Kazushi Ono. VPRO TV in the Netherlands produced a film entitled “Sasha Toperich plays Rachmaninov at Christophori in Amsterdam.” He is also the recipient of the UNESCO Artist for Peace title.

Aylin Ünver Noi is a Non-Resident Senior Fellow at the Center for Transatlantic Relations (CTR) at the Johns Hopkins University Paul H. Nitze School of Advanced International Studies (SAIS). She is Associate Professor at Istinye University, International Relations department since May 2017. She is member of the Governing Board and Advisory Council of the Mediterranean Citizens’ Assembly Foundation-FACM in Valencia. Ünver Noi is affiliated as Associate Researcher at European Institute for Research on Mediterranean and Euro-Arab Cooperation – MEDEA, in Brussels. She taught “International Politics of the European Union I-II” courses at the European Union Institute (a Jean Monnet Center of Excellence) at Marmara University (2015-2017) in Istanbul. She was the Director of European Union Application and Research Center (2015-2016) and Assistant Professor at International Relations department (2011-2016) at Istanbul Gedik University. She holds a B.A. from the Department of International Relations at Bilkent University in Ankara, and a M.A. and Ph.D. from the Department of European Union Politics and International Relations, the European Union Institute at Marmara University in Istanbul. She was visiting fellow at the Center for Transatlantic Relations (CTR) at the Johns Hopkins University Paul H. Nitze School of Advanced International Studies (SAIS) (2014-2015). She is the author of the books Avrupa’da Yükselen Milliyetçilik- The Rise of Nationalism in Europe (2007) and The Euro-Mediterranean Partnership and the Broader Middle East and North Africa Initiative: Competing or Complementary Projects? (2011) as well as several scholarly articles and chapters published in journals and edited book volumes. She is the editor of the book Islam and Democracy: Perspectives on the Arab Spring (2013), and with Sasha Toperich she is the co-editor of Challenges of Democracy in the European Union and Its Neighbors (Washington, DC: Center for Transatlantic Relations, 2016). Ünver Noi has a blog at the Huffington Post.

Alida Vračić has been the Director and co-founder of Populari, a think tank based in Sarajevo, Bosnia and Herzegovina since 2007. Populari works to bridge the gap between policy, knowledge, and people on the ground by preparing evidence-based reports that inform policy debates and inform a broader audience of key issues facing Bosnia’s development. Prior to founding Populari, Alida worked with the European Stability Initiative, a think tank based in Berlin, on projects related to judicial and economic issues. She has also led several Balkan-wide projects at the Human Rights Centre at Sarajevo University and at the Spanish Institutional Programme-program for institutional co-operation of judicial nature with the ombudsmen, bar associations, and associations of judges in Bosnia-Herzegovina and the region. Vracic has also worked for the State Court prosecutor's team and at the Human Rights Commission within the Constitutional Court of Bosnia. She holds an M.Sc. in international public policy from the University College London and a B.A. from the Law School at the University of Sarajevo, specializing in criminal law, human rights, and the Dayton Peace Agreement. Ms. Vračić has also studied criminal proceedings and the penal system in Austria. In 2011, Alida completed a course on Strategic Management for Leaders of Non-Governmental Organizations, which is part of the executive education program at Harvard University's John F. Kennedy School of Government. In 2015, Alida won two prestigious fellowships (Mercator Stiftung fellow, SWP Berlin and Marshall Memorial Fellowship, GMF).

Murat Yeşiltaş is an Associate Professor at the Middle East Institute at Sakarya University. He is also Director of Security Studies at the SETA Foundation in Ankara. In 2010-2011, he was a Visiting Fellow at Virginia Tech's Institute of Government and International Relations. Yeşiltaş was a Visiting Researcher at the Department of European Studies and International Politics of Lancaster University between 2008 and 2009. His current research topics are focused on ethnic and religious radicalization, the geopolitics of non-state conflicts, and Kurdish affairs. He is working on the following research projects: "Kurds in the New Middle East: Remaking of the Kurdish Political Subjectivity and the New Kurdish Geopolitical Imagination" and "The New Regional Security Project." Yesiltas's most recent books are Non-State Military Actors in the Middle East: Geopolitics, Identity and Strategy (ed) (Palgrave, 2017), The Geopolitical Mentality and Turkish Military (Kadim, 2016) and Türkiye Dünyanın Neresinde Hayali Coğrafyalar Çarğışan Anlatılar were published in 2015 by Koc University Press. He completed his B.A. and M.A. at the Department of International Relations of Sakarya University, in 2003 and 2009, respectively. He earned his Ph.D. at the Department of Political Science and International Relations at Marmara University in 2012 with a thesis titled "Locating Turkey: Geopolitical Mentality and the Army in Turkey."